BIRDS THAT MORE THAN PAY FOR THEIR BOARD

The article includes many instances, as well, of saving crops both field and garden, in eastern sections, of near-annihilation of grubs, moths, caterpillars, beetles and parasites in trees, especially in orchards, and shows the great good done by birds in eating weed seeds.

Owls have been placed in rat or mice-infested cellars and granaries, he says, with such success as to eliminate there that source of widespread economic loss in grains and cereals.

Hothouse gardeners, he declares, have often found it profitable to introduce various species of birds, known to be insect or lice destroyers, within the houses instead of spraying or otherwise using chemicals and fumigating. The latter processes, he declares, have often been found to weaken and stunt the tender young plants, while no disadvantage otherwise arose from the presence of the birds.

While it is true, he says, that many species feed upon and yearly destroy quantities of grains, fruits or berries, the good they do in eradicating or keeping down the numbers of the growers' other enemies is more than worth this slight reimbursement.

He also tells how ducks have been used as exterminators of insect pests, especially mosquitoes, by keeping them on ponds or in marshes where they feed upon the larvae or young. Ducks have proven invaluable in this cleaning out marshy sections which could not otherwise be rid of mosquitoes by draining.

Quail have also been introduced into alfalfa fields where they are great destroyers of the alfalfa weevil, and while the farmers were at first against the practice, the better crops coming from the fields where the quail had almost eradicated the weevil demonstrated their value. Now, Mr. McAtee says, there are sections in the alfalfa growing regions where farmers will not permit quail hunting.

Summing up, he declares farmers will soon see the wisdom of protecting many bird species upon their land, mainly by supplying food during times of scarcity, water for drinking and bathing, and next boxes or nesting places, as well as protecting them from molestation at all times. Detailed information on the subject of attracting birds, as well as upon those species of value to the farmer and gardener, may be obtained from publications distributed by the agricultural department.

'HEALTH' AND 'WEALTH' ARE CLOSELY RELATED

Only One Letter Differentiates the Two Says Dr. A. R. Lewis Who Tells How To Retain Health

"Only one letter differentiates the word 'health' from 'wealth' and the things which give are even more closely related," says Dr. A. R. Lewis, state health officer, who adds:

Are you and your community for a program education and demonstration aimed at giving mothers and babies a fair chance at childbirth, and a good start toward manhood and womanhood. And would you be willing to cooperate to that end? If so, Miss Eunice Holmes, the Public Health Nurse for the Bureau of Maternity and Infancy Hygiene, will be glad to go to your town and give a "Mother and Child Talk" and organize a "Mother's Keep Well Club."

Miss Holmes is prepared to demonstrate the best, most convenient, and economical maternity clothes, Wynter, and first short clothes; also how to dress the baby without tiring his tender little body, how to properly bathe the baby, and many other things of interest and importance to the mother.

Since the welfare of the baby is intimately connected with the life and health of its mother, Miss Holmes will talk to the mothers about the importance of prenatal and its effects upon both mother and baby, and since five times as many bottle-fed babies die before one year of age as breast-fed babies, Miss Holmes will explain to the mother what to eat, how to eat, and the health habits to be observed that she may be able to protect her baby by nursing it. Authorities on statistics say that the soldier who went to France had seven times as many chances of returning as the bottle-fed baby has of surviving the first year.

During her stay in your community Miss Holmes will get aside a time during which the mothers may bring their individual health problems to her privately and she will help them find a way out of the difficulty. No matter what your problem is, it is how difficult it may seem Miss Holmes will know just what to tell you to do. She has done Public Health Nursing for several years in connection with the Red Cross, and nursed the boys three years overseas.

Any town or community can secure the services of Miss Holmes if it has a club, church, organization or even two or three, capable, public-spirited women who will cooperate with her. Write a letter today to the Bureau of Maternity and Infancy Hygiene, care State Health Department, stating just when it will be convenient for Miss Holmes to visit your town.

To bring the most good to the greatest number we shall have to conserve our funds and watch closely the flow of financial resources. We shall have to be economical.

so that her itinerary may be arranged to the best possible advantage from the standpoint of economy.

HOT, MAYBE, BUT NOT LIKE IT WAS IN 1918

Temperature has been the subject of so much talk, vituperation, impudence and probability, during this month that it is well this is not 1918, when the weather records show temperatures on June 18 of 101 degrees Fahrenheit; June 21, 107; June 25, 104; June 26, 102; June 27, 101; June 28, 102; June 29, 102. That was a year to talk about. According to the weather bureau we should be ashamed of ourselves to cuss this month's weather. It was rather cool in the first part of the month and during the latter part has not been really hot save on one day, when a maximum of 104 was obtained. Saturday's maximum was 98; today at noon it was 78, which was 20 degrees cooler than at the same hour Saturday. Sunday's maximum temperature was 79.

The following is the record of the June weather for the past five years: 1922, hottest day, June 21, 107; coolest, June 3, 62; 1921, hottest day June 1, 93; coolest, 63; 1920, hottest June 30, 98; coolest, 55; 1919, hottest, June 28, 95; coolest, 55; 1918, hottest, June 26, 95, coolest, 59; 1917, hottest, June 21, 107, coolest, 62.

Precipitation for June: 1922, .94 inch; 1921, 3.57 inches; 1920, 1.47 inches; 1919, 9.45 inches; 1918, 5.39 inches.

AND SHE DOES!

"Should a woman tell?" asks Hazel Batchelor. The theoretical answer has little to do with the substantial fact. She will tell, ninety-nine times out of a hundred.
